2023 YEAR IN REVIEW

Whew! What a year! The major condo headline for both Eastside and Seattle condos: Prices hold steady while demand dips 25%! While this is sensationalized, it's true. Likely due to the fact that inventory was also down by 20%, which means that supply and demand remained aligned and shielded homeowners from what could have been a massive hit to their bottom lines.

On the Eastside, when the dust settled, prices are down by 1%. The largest drop in median price was East Bellevue losing 11% while Kirkland soared above all other neighborhoods with double digit gains (up 19%). Other areas of note: West Bellevue topped the charts with a median sale price of $880,000! This is higher than the $876,000 residential median sale price in the city of Seattle.

Speaking of Seattle, the condo market in the city reminds us of The Little Engine That Could. Chugging merrily along despite having the odds stacked against it: I think I can! Overall, the city posted a 5% gain year over year with record high median sales price of $546,000. Downtown saw the highest overall unit volume at 439 total sales, while Greenlake/Ballard boasted the highest overall gain in median price at 15% appreciation. All good news, finally.
